CAMPUS WEEK

Students came back to the campus Monday, sporting a tarnished Thanksgiving spirit, and turkey and cranberry sandwiches in their lunch sacks. SUB hamburgers took a back seat.

It was a stormy week as weather went. Rain drenched students tucked books under their arms and let themselves be buffeted by a strong wind as they scurried between classes.

Signs of a new painting appeared in Jones. Shiny grey stairs between lower and first floor Jones surprised many with their cleanliness. Some classrooms had the lower half of the walls changed to a blueish green. People began thinking of Christmas. Greeks planned Christmas dances, and Christmas carolers began to formulate plans for caroling. Organ music could be heard as musicians practiced in the little chapel.

Some Greeks met Monday night (See Greeks). Rally Comm cancelled their meeting, as did other Greeks. It was time for basketball, and Logger fans traveled in the rain to Olympia and the first game with St. Martin's at the Olympia Armory (See Sports).

AWS career conferences took the spotlight Tuesday, preceded by an all-school chapel. (See Convocation). Debators practiced in the afternoon. Another tournament was near (See Students).

The Little Keafauber hearings lured many from the campus as the Day room of the Armory became the official place to meet. One student remarked, "It's too bad they couldn't have this at the fieldhouse. There are more kids here than at school." It seemed true. The campus was deserted. Students were suddenly quite civic minded, and frankly curious about heretofore unseen city characters.

The football team gathered for its last official meeting at the annual inspirational banquet Wednesday night (See Sports).

The debate team left early this morning for Spokane, and WAA girls looked forward to their ice skating party tonight at Lakewood (See Sports). That and the SAE pledge dance tonight were the only social events listed for the weekend, which promised to be a slow one, as far as campus activity was concerned.

STUDENTS

Summer School Abroad . . .

Once again CPS is making preparations for a summer session of learning overseas. For the second straight year the college will send students abroad to soak up some Old World culture. The place, Gothenburg, Sweden. The time, July 12 to August 16.

Tuition, room and board for the five-week session will cost a total of $200. In addition the students will have to pay transportation expenses. They will journey by water and will embark from New York City. Their learning will start on the ship where they will receive a smattering of the languages of Europe, its habits, customs and history. In addition to the actual class sessions in Gothenburg, the students will take part in conducted tours.

CPS is joining with Emory University, Atlanta, Georgia, in the educational venture. The two American colleges are getting together with the Union School of the Methodist Church in Scandinavia for an interchange of teaching methods, professors and students.

At least one CPS educator, Christian Miller, associate professor of German, will be on the Gothenburg faculty. Miller will be assistant to the school director in Scandinavia.

Only 100 American students will be accommodated at the international school. Because of the necessity of early steamship bookings and the time it will take for screening processes to determine who will be eligible, students are urged to apply early.

The normal study load for the five-week session will be three subjects, two semester hour credits to be given for each one. A tentative list of subjects to be offered includes American education system, Man in Christian thinking, Continental European Theology, Readings in American Literature, Modern European Literature, Modern Scandinavian Literature, Principles of Christian Ethics.

An opportunity to see what went on during last summer's session in Europe will be possible on the night of December 7. Color slides of pictures taken by CPS students while they were in Europe will be shown in the auditorium in Jones Hall starting at 7:30 o'clock. Lon Hoover will be in charge. The program will last about an hour.

Blood Drive . . .

Wanted: Your blood.

The blood bank campaign of the Knights and the Spurs starts this Monday. It will last all week.

For every three pints of blood donated, two will go to the fighting men in Korea and one will be turned over to the CPS blood bank.

To drive home the point that blood is needed in a bad way a special show will be presented this Monday night by a traveling troupe of Spurs and Knights. The show will be staged at each fraternity and sorority house on the campus. Directing the performances will be Wally Tomstad and Janet (Jolly) Johnston.

"We're going to try and get each of the various groups and organizations on the campus to donate in a body, with a fixed date set for each one," was the word from Anita Roberts, co-chairman of the blood bank campaign. "All the school groups have a Spurs and Knights representative in their organization and they can apply for their donation time through them."

Anita pointed out that because next week has been set aside for the blood bank campaign, does not mean that students have to confine their donation to that time, but that they can do so any time before or after.

Co-chairman with Anita in the campaign is Bruce Brooke.

Persons under 21 wishing to donate blood must have the permission of their parents.

California Tourney . . .

Two weeks ago on a cold Saturday morning two car loads of debaters left for California. They were going to the Western Speech Teachers Association Tournament at Fresno. Representing CPS were Shelia Ryan, Nadean Taylor, Tom Stanfield, Larry Grotz, Arlis Johnson, Bob Zelasko, Richard Dunn and Doctor Battin, coach. The trip down was uneventful except for those who had to become accustomed to Doc Battin's eating habits, which consist of going all day with no food, then eating a big meal at night. Almost all of the squad were recovering from an attack of flu and there were many stops besides for gas.

The tournament began Monday morning and the main events continued until Tuesday afternoon. At a banquet Tuesday evening the first winners were announced. Out of the fifty-two colleges and some four hundred debaters, CPS had five entries in the semi-finals. They were Bob Zelasko and Shelia Ryan in oratory, Arlis Johnson in oratory and extemporaneous speaking, and Richard Dunn, in discussion. Wednesday the final events were held, and CPS students were in with the best. In the final scores, Shelia Ryan and Nadean Taylor were tied for third in junior women's debate, Bob Zelasko took fifth in senior Men's Oratory, and Richard Dunn tied for fourth in junior men's discussion.

The teams returned home via San Francisco.

More Tournaments . . .

With their teeth sharpened after their first tournament in California, the debate squad prepared to invade the Inland Empire with their sharp words and knowledge of the economic situation as a whole. Early this morning while most were thinking about getting up, Barbara McDougal, Darlene Trineer, Tom Meadowcraft, Ed Olmstead, Curtis King, Ed Durocher, and Tom Stanfield will head over the snow covered hills to compete in the debate tournament at Gonzaga in Spokane.

Ski Tow . . .

For the last few weeks a group of CPS men have been working on a project that will do a lot to promote skiing at our school. They've been building a ski tow at the Deep Creek area. It is a thousand foot rope tow and will be ready for use by the middle of December. The area was burned off and logged last year through the cooperation of the U. S. Forestry Service. The tow tickets will be priced to fit the student's pocketbook, with members of Chinook getting a special rate on top of that.

Outstanding features of the tow are that it offers terrain suitable to all classes of skiers, including novices; it is within a short distance of the lodge and cabins, no chains are needed; and adequate parking space will be provided.

Ski Classes . . .

Registration is now possible for this year's ski classes, according to Dr. Sprenger, Chinook adviser. The classes will begin next month, with a definite date to be set soon.

The classes will constitute a second semester course as they have in the past. It was decided to start them early this year to take advantage of the heavy winter months. The fee, $10, will be charged against next semester's account, Dr. Sprenger said.

The course will consist of fifteen weekend sessions at either Cayuse Pass or the college's own Deep Creek area, depending on the snow conditions. A one hour credit will be given, and a minimum of 12 sessions must be attended before a student can receive it, Dr. Sprenger said.

Work will be completed this week on the college ski tow at Deep Creek, Dr. Sprenger said, and will be ready for use as soon as there is enough snow.

Dr. Sprenger also announced that the tow at Cayuse Pass will be operating this weekend.

Campus Chest Results . . .

Six Greek organizations either voted or assessed a dollar per member giving hundred per cent support to the Campus Chest. Collections under the direction of JoAnne Wood and Warren Hunt totaled $801.21 or about 80% of the goal. Many students caught short of money during the Flash Drive, pledged their donations. These pledges may be redeemed at the Bursar's office. In the fraternity and sorority standings, the Lambdas, Gamma's, Pi Phi's, Sigma Chi's, Delta Kaps and Theta Chi's were 100%, Sig Alphas, 87%; the Kappa Sigs, 75%; Sigma Nus, 62%; and the Tri Deltas, 50%.

carols. Those interested in singing with the Collegiate Singers can receive information from Dick Henderson or members of the group about rehearsals.

CHAPEL

Convocation . . .

There were no classes between 10 and 12 on Tuesday. An all-school chapel was held and students had an opportunity to hear qualified leaders in their own chosen fields in a Career Conference.

Neon Knobel, chairman of the vocational conference committee gave a general outline of the program and introduced Corrine Engle, AWS president.

Corrine introduced the guest speakers, seated behind her on the stage who rose momentarily so students could identify them, and she then introduced Dr. Thompson.

Dr. Thompson spoke several minutes on "Carving Your Own Career" highlighting his speech with details such as Galileo having his students drop objects from the leaning tower—incidents which led to the discovery of the law of gravity.

Then the students scattered to the rooms designated in the vocational conference schedule to hear the speakers in their field of interest.

General fields represented were art, business administration, education, home economics, music, pre-professional, occupational therapy, radio and television, science and theology.

Stuffed Birds . . .

Another specimen was added this week to the CPS Natural History Museum. The specimen was a mounting of a passenger pigeon, and is the third piece of extinct fowl to be added to the museum in the last month. The bird joins specimens of an Alaskan Curlew and a Carolina Parakeet. The pigeon, from a now extinct line of birds, was given to the museum by Fred Boehm, a pharmacist at Tacoma General Hospital.

Tudor's Trip . . .

Professor Tudor returns to the campus Monday after a trip to Cincinnati. He attended a city charter revision clinic there, and also the National Municipal League convention. Professor Tudor also stopped in Chicago to learn of available agencies to study the present Tacoma city government. He is chairman of the Mayor's charter revision committee.

Vaught Recital . . .

Raymond Vaught will present a violin recital Sunday in Jones Hall Auditorium at 4 o'clock. The recital will be the first in two years to be complimentary to the public. Mr. Vaught will be accompanied by the Tacoma String Quartet and Leonard Jacobson.

SPORTS

Plain Guts . . .

What constitutes a good basketball team? That question, a subject of much discussion this time of year, brings to mind the 1951 edition of the Logger hoopsters.

It is believed that a good team should have a certain amount of height, some idea of defense, a little finesse in handling and passing the ball, natural shooting ability and a fast moving offense. With these attributes in their favor, most teams can win a good share of their games.

But, in the big ones—the crucials—the ones that really count—it takes something else. It takes an intangible something to give a team that added zing. Teams have it or they don't. It's not something that you can buy, instill or even learn. It's either there or it isn't. Some people call it spirit; others say it's will-to-win; many claim it's just plain guts.

All of which brings to mind the 1951 Loggers. They opened their season in Olympia Monday night.

And, Saint Martin's didn't even give them a chance to warm-up for their initial start. A quick Ranger lay-in gave the Saints an early lead which they stubbornly held. They led 20-8 at the end of the first quarter and increased their margin to 24-8 before the Loggers could get untracked.

Faced with the 16 point deficit and a subsequent 34-22 halftime disadvantage, the Loggers came roaring back. On little more than determination, they began whittling the Saint Martin's lead. By the end of the third period, it was 44-40.

Then, with six minutes remaining to play, Captain Jake Maberry swished a lay-in to tie the affair at 46-46. Center Don Maitland broke through for two points and dropped in another from the corner for a 50-46 edge. After that, the Loggers held on. Little Russ Wilkerson, a frosh starting his first college game, hit two free throws and Maberry added a push shot before Maitland closed out the scoring with a free toss.

The 56-53 comeback marked the official opening of CPS basketball. The win, while not convincing, was far from discouraging. This year's team is a long ways behind the '50-

'51 team which was so impressive in their season's opener. But, this one has that all-important attribute—the ability to come back.

In one game, they have proved themselves. They possess the spirit and will-to-win. In some phases of the sport, they have shortcomings. But, their eagerness and hustle is undeniable.

As the season progresses, they seem almost certain to learn and progress with it. Their future should prove fascinating, indeed. Maberry is undoubtedly one of the better players in Northwest small colleges. Wilkerson is one of the brightest freshman prospects in years. Maitland and Inveen have improved immensely and should go on bettering themselves. Several of the others show promise.

This year is the test of Logger spirit. If it stays undampened, theirs could be a highly successful season. A team need not be judged on wins and losses. Rather, it should be judged on how it plays the game. Fans who saw the Monday tilt feel certain that this year's team will hold its own in both departments.

The Loggers will try to progress further with a Thursday night game in Portland against Lewis and Clark and Friday and Saturday tilts at Salem with Willamette.

Skating Party . . .

The WAA ice skating party will be held tonight from 10:30 to 12:30 at the Lakewood Ice Arena. Tickets are 50 cents. Chairmen Diane McCormack and Martha Wegner invite everyone to attend.

Hail and Farewell . . .

Between mouthfuls of chicken, the Logger footballers honored each other at the Top of the Ocean Wednesday night in their traditional post-season banquet.

After all the laurels were handed out, the Loggers had themselves a pair of captains for 1952 and Bob Demko received the inspirational award for the second straight year. Demko co-captained this year's squad with Don Murdock.

Wally Erwin and Joe Retallick were picked to lead the Loggers next year. Erwin, a fullback, and Retallick, an end, were two of the outstanding members of this year's team.

The banquet was an occasion for farewell speeches from several graduating seniors. Demko, Murdock, Earl Combs, Ed Annas, Jack Adams, Lindy Aliemnt, Jack Fabulich, Dick Boyle and Dick Colombini all bade goodbye to their mates.
